Once again, the Newfoundland Historical Society has been receiving kind remarks from attendees at our recent symposium, 17th Century Newfoundland: The English Shore. We were pleased not only with the number of people who attended but also with their level of participation. The success was due to a combination of factors: an interesting program which included the leading scholars on the topic of 17th century Newfoundland, a lively and well informed audience, and a well planned event for which I would like to thank the programme committee, chaired by Terry Bishop Sterling. The programme was designed to appeal to the general public, and to invite debate and discussion, all of which serves our mandate of bringing history into the public realm. As a result of this and similar events over the past several years, the work of the Society is becoming better known to the general community.

Throughout the Fall and Winter the NHS presented a successful series of lectures. The last event in this series is scheduled for Thursday, April 26th, and will combine a lecture and a book launch. Dr. Ronald Rompkey will present a lecture entitled Jessie Luther and the Grenfell Mission, to be followed by the launch of his book of the same title. Books will be available that night at a discount to our members.

The final public event for the Society this year will be a symposium on the history of the forest industries in Western Newfoundland entitled Woodland Echoes, and to be held May 4 and 5 in Corner Brook. The forest industry has been the mainstay of the Corner Brook economy since Newfoundland Power and Paper Company Limited celebrated its official opening in 1925.

Those attending the symposium will find themselves involved in a number of engaging activities with both an historical perspective and a local flavour - panel discussions, theme dinners, fascinating lectures and interactive lessons by presenters with a flair for bringing history to life. A committee comprising staff and faculty at Sir Wilfred Grenfell College, representatives of Corner Brook Pulp and Paper Limited, and members of the Newfoundland Historical Society are in the process of finalizing this exciting two-day schedule.

The news that the provincial government has increased the annual heritage grant by $80,000 in the recent budget has come as a welcome surprise. The NHS has worked hard over the past several years to convince the government of the economic and social value of investment in the Heritage Sector. Some of our hard work seems to have paid off! The Society will continue to play its part to raise awareness of heritage issues.

Mary Bridson will be stepping down from her duties as NHS office manager at the end of April. I would like to thank Mary for her hard work and dedication over the past six years and wish her the best of luck in her future endeavours. I would also like to thank Darrell Hillier and Karen Cole, who will not be seeking re-election. Darrell edited the newsletter for the last eighteen months, and has also been managing our website. Karen has served on the programme committee. Thank you also to the other members of the executive for their contribution to the Society over the past year, and our members for their continued support.

Eleanor Dawson,
President

Obituary

We are sorry to note the passing of Rupert Bartlett, retired Justice of the Supreme Court of Newfoundland, on December 31, 2000, aged 79. Mr. Bartlett was an active member of the Society for many years, serving on the Cabot Celebrations Committee of 1947-49, as Councillor, Hon. Secretary, Treasurer, Vice President, and finally as President in 1972-73, after which he was awarded honorary membership.

Goodbye!

I have enjoyed meeting so many of our members, old and new, near and far, over the last six years, and helping them with their enquiries. I hope to continue seeing you at Society events, from the other side of the table!

NHS Winter Lectures, 2001

On January 25 Gabrielle Kemp spoke to a packed hall on The Apotheosis of Sir Wilfred Grenfell: Photography, Philanthropy and Christian Manhood at the Labrador Mission. With the use of carefully chosen slides, several from the collection of Grenfell's own hand tinted lantern slides at the Provincial Archives, she explored the way in which photography was used, or even manipulated, long before the advent of modern photo journalism and graphic documentaries. Dignitaries in St. John's did not like the images of poverty and neglect that the photographs suggested, but Grenfell was not condemned like his contemporary Dr. Bernardo for questionable before and after shots. The images also showed a transformation of the character of Sir Wilfred, from the early shots of physical prowess and the Victorian ideal of manliness, to the later portraits of a fatherly, caring figure, a compelling tool in the building of Grenfell and his mission into a worthy and godlike figure and cause.

From a 1932 calendar depicting the work of Sir Wilfred and the Grenfell Mission, produced as a fundraiser by the Grenfell Association [7.04.046]

Over 50 people braved the icy blustery weather on February 22 to hear Margot Duley's stimulating talk about the important role played by farming in the Newfoundland economy in the 18th and early 19th centuries, and especially women's participation in it. A native Newfoundlander, Dr. Duley has spent much of her academic life studying and writing about women's place in Newfoundland history, and this talk comprises part of a comprehensive study to be published in the future. Beginning and ending with a wonderful adaptation of Otto Kelland's famous song, Let me Farm at Cape St. Mary's was a well documented examination of this aspect of outpost life, its triumphs over poor soil, lack of government attention and funding, its vital role as a supplement to the fishery, and its very high rate of potato production at its peak, before the decline of the 1920s.
